Home to the NBA's Sacramento Kings, Golden 1 Center has brought a whole new meaning to 'game day'. Standing before the 17,608-seat arena, its silver-plated exterior and squat, shell-like frame, one might wonder what all the fuss is about.

A displacement ventilation system controls the internal temperature through vents at the seat level instead of circulating high-volume forced air from the ceiling. The stadium has been awarded the LEED Platinum status, and is the first stadium of its kind to be run completely on solar power.

In terms of connectivity, Golden 1 Center sets a new precedent. Twin 100-gigabit-per-second pipelines deliver super-fast bandwidth to the ground – similar to what a city with roughly 70,000 inhabitants would receive. At this speed, fans could send 500,000 snapshots per second to friends.

Plan now to be part of a special VIP behind-the-scenes tour of the Golden 1 Center.

The event is sponsored by FS Medical Technology, a CSHE Gold Sponsor.
